A perfect pairing

An architectural icon

Taking inspiration from the historic designs and patterns in National Trust properties, the Kedleston Hall edit and Primary edit designs bring both the grandeur and heritage of stately homes to your own.

Not only does the National Trust collection look striking in any home, but the UK sales of this collection will continue to help the National Trust to look after the 500 places, 780 miles of coastline and 250,000 hectares of land in its care.

The Kedleston Hall Edit

Inspired by history

Kedleston Hall is inundated with captivating features that exude charming character and inspirational design. At every turn you'll find something beautiful, whether it's an intricate carving, elegant needlework or classic art.

Our design team were mesmerised by the hall; creatively inspired, they crafted this wonderful new collection, with patterns and colour combinations that are both timeless in style and modern in versatility.

From the stone coffering and plaster mouldings that delicately line the ceilings, to the ornate textile patterns that adorn Lady Mary Curzon's captivating peacock dress - explore our new collection and inspiration behind each design.

A fashion-inspired Parquet

Venetian Parquet Wood takes inspiration from the intricate patterns seen in Lady Mary Curzon's peacock dress. With its roots in traditional Indian embroidery, the peacock feather has been reimagined in this contemporary take on Parquet, adding a new dimension. This modern pattern shows linear movement, lending itself perfectly to a textured wood pairing; with four varied oak tones, Venetian Parquet Wood will add character to your home.

A versatile laying pattern

The peacock-dress-inspired pattern offers a whole new aesthetic when crafted with different materials. Whilst the woods form a more authentic parquetry feel, this marble creates dramatic contrast. With two versatile colourways, Venetian Parquet Stone carries character into any space: a bold monochrome combination and a softer pairing of pink and grey hues.

Akari Lattice

Woven to perfection

Akari Lattice blends authentic woods and effortless pattern, showing the grain's movement and texture. The delicate pattern is inspired by a beautiful gilt fretwork cabinet, commissioned around 1758 and crafted by famous London cabinet maker John Linnell. The four single-colour designs offer a variety of looks, from modernising light tones to more dramatic deep wood hues.

Temple Diamond

From ceiling to floor

The inspiration for Temple Diamond began further afield than Kedleston. When designing the Saloon ceiling alcoves, Adam looked to the Roman Forum, where similar diamond coffering can be seen in the Temple of Venus.

This geometric pattern exudes a traditional tile aesthetic; but with three contrasting colourways, it gives a sense of modernity that allows it to pair effortlessly with both period and contemporary homes.
